Northwest Passages Concert review from Fiona

In June I attended the Bellingham Chamber Chorale's concert, Northwest Passages. This concert's music was written around a poem by Carla Shafer. The music was fun to listen to because it was written like a story that was then brought to life through the choir's voices. The choir members created a positive energy that rubbed off on everyone in the audience. While there, I learned how something tangible, like the taste of honey, could be turning into something as beautiful as music. The concert helped me see what I could do with my own talents someday. I hope more kids my age will be able to experience what I got to.
